In the congested program of studies incident to the present-day school, such preparation has become exceedingly burdensome to the teacher. The author hopes to lighten this task by providing ready-to-use material which may be freely drawn upon. Part One contains A Course of Study and Suggested Groupings. , Obviously, a Reader in which the material is organized cannot be studied throughout, page by page. Because of this fact, the Manual provides a Course, which is intended to blaze a pathway through the book, having regard for sequence, variety, and flexibility. In the Suggested Groupings, the selections are arranged according to theme, or according to various phases...
