Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: . . . to Philadelphia, settled there to what has proved to be a profitable business in 1875. ARTHUR H. FKVVKES. Not many miles from Bostons busy throng, in Newton, otherwise known as the Garden City--one of those e. -. quisitely beautiful little residential towns for which the suburbs of the old liay State capital are renowned--may be found the home and nursery grounds and greenhouses of Mr. Fewkes. The proprietor is by nature a. rather reserved man, but the visitor who is interested in Chrysanthemums, and competent to talk about them intelligently, can readily remove all shyness by turning the conversation to these flowers. They are his favorites, and with a knowledge of them which I have seldom seen equalled, he delights to point out to an appreciative companion their individual merits and demerits, meanwhile commenting entertainingly on their history. Mr. Fewkes is a native of the city...
